

Halloween around the world

In lots of places, people light a little flame in the dark to remember the people they love.

Ireland and Scotland

Samhain • October 31

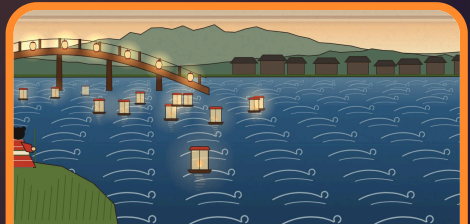

At the end of the harvest, people lit huge bonfires. Some wore disguises, maybe so the spirits wouldn't know them.

Mexico

Día de los Muertos • Nov 1–2

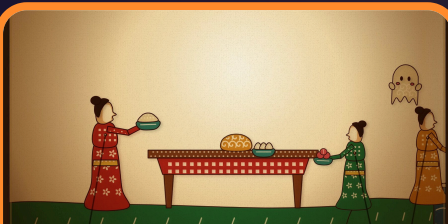

Families build bright altars with orange marigolds, photos, and their grandparents' favorite foods. It's a happy way to remember.

Japan

Obon • summer

Families welcome their ancestors home. At the end, some towns float paper lanterns down the river to light the way back.

China

Hungry Ghost Festival • late summer

People leave out food for wandering spirits and float lanterns on the water, so no spirit is lonely or hungry.

Poland

November 1

Families visit their grandparents' graves. They light so many candles that whole cemeteries glow at night.

Your turn!

In America, the flame moved into a pumpkin. Where would you put your little flame? Draw it on the map, then design your own pumpkin face.

Design a pumpkin, a mask, or a monster at kubrio.com/halloween